Experience has taught us that children acquire languages more east y and more perfectly than people of more advanced years. In Hussia, where the study of languages is carried to the highest perfection, it is not rare to meet children from six to ten years old who will converse fisently in four different languages. Reading is scarcely known to them; grammar still less. Everything is the result of imitaging description of sounds—a faculty which children have to signal degree. Parents should not neglect this, and should remember how short the time is from six to ten when the shild can, while playing, acquire what later becomes so difficult as far as accent and prenunciation are concerned.

Editors Dispatch: I am a workingman, and I have been asked by many why they do not see Mr. Chamberlayne face to face; why he does not seek them and show himself in their presence ready to answer any questions.

The answer is easy, and I wish you to publish it at my expense. Mr. Chamberlayne gives his opinions through The State daily, and his friends rest his claims upon the expressions of the newspaper

Why he cannot interview and shake hands with all the many voters of the city of Richtesies that are so powerful in fostering the mond is equally easy to answer. The Conservative Committee has chosen him out of the twelve candidates for the Legislature in Richmond to make speeches throughout the State in behalf of the good cause. On Monday the 1st he was sent to Charlottesville, where he made a speech conclusive in its argument and appeal-a speech highly complimented by such men as Coghill, Leake, White, Southall, Judge Brown, and in general by the leading men of Albemarle. Tomorrow he is ordered by the committee to Sussex Courthouse, where he speaks with the Hon. John Goode. On Friday he goes to Gordonsville, by order, to meet Mr. Mussey, along with the Hon. General Eppa Hunton and other distinguished statesmen.

On Monday the 8th of September he is ordered to Suffolk to meet whomsoever the enemy of the Conservative party shall put upon the stump, and will aid and be aided by the Hon. John Goode, the Hon. Senator Withers, and other distinguished men.

Let every voter understand that this candidate is working for the general good throughout the Commonwealth of Virginia, and that his friends will see to it that his unselfish and patriotic exertion shall be recognized and rewarded by the citizens of this metropolis.

Mr. Chamberlayne is doing bis duty in the Commonwealth at large. Let every man in this city do his duty by Mr. Chamberiayne, and swell the vote which will be sufficient, but which should put him at the head of the ticket nominated.

To Henry M. Atkinson, Dear Sir,-I hope you will not object to answering the following questions:

Are you for Mahone? Are you for Dick Walker for Public Printer? Are you for a convention to settle the public debt? Are you in favor of the Moffett liquor law ?

Are you in favor of the Sunday liquor law? Are you in favor of requiring the capitation-tax to be paid before entering children at public school? Are you the same Henry Atkinson who was an Independent candidate for Commonwealth's attorney of Henrico county in 1870 in opposition to Mr. McDowell Carrington, the regular nominee of the Conservative Convention that was held at the county court-house? VOTERS.

[Communicated.] RICHMOND, September 3, 1879.

Editors Dispatch: I notice the card of H. A. Atkinson, Jr., in to-day's Dispatch about being in favor of the debt settlement. It reads all right; but why don't he answer whether he will or will not vote for Mahone? It may be true that there is no issue in the mind of one candidate for the House in Richmond about Mahone, but in Atkinson's case particularly there may be. It is said that Atkinson ran against the Conservative nominee, J. McDowell Carrington, for Commonwealth's attorney of Henrico about 1870, and beat Carrington by getting the Radical votes. If so, be (Atkinson) was certainly a bolter. Now, if he wants to show to the true Conservative party that he has repented, let him say that he will not vote for Mahone, who is the head bolter of them all. I see nothing unreasonable in the question to candidates asking if they will vote for Mahone, for it is believed that he has lofty aspirations; and if a Conservative candidate cannot say that he will not vote for a Bolter it is not surprising that the true Conservatives will not trust the candidate who refuses so to answer. Why does not Atkinson answer the THE WALWORTHS .- Says a Saratoga let- THE CATHOLIC BENEFICIAL SOCIETY OF question? Pinback, Clover Hill; T. J. Wooldridge, Bermuda; H. C. Watkins, Manchester; R. B. Jones, Matoaca; and J. E. Cox, Midlothian.

The Committee on Resolutions offered the following, which were unanimously adopted:

Whereas the Conservative State Central Committee in an address to the people of Virginia have fully set forth the aims, objects, and wishes of the party they represent : therefore be it. 1. Resolved, That we cordully endorse the said address as being the true platform upon which all true Conservatives should stand. 12. That we believe the McCulloch bill to be entirely just; and honorable, and call upon all good Conservatives to give their undivided, earnest, and united support to the same. 3. That we regard any further agitation of the debt question as subversive of right and justice, and look to bli Conservative to frown upon and oppose any effort to defeat the wishes of the people. 4. That the party requires of the candidates for election to the General Assembly for the ensuing fail a full and unequivocal declaration of sympathy with and determination to support and carry out by legislation the principles declared and set forth in said address. 5. That a copy of these resolutions be published in the Richmond Dispatch, Whig, and Petersburg Index-Appeal.

Each district was fully represented in the convention, there being more than forty present, besides a large number of the most prominent citizens from all parts of the county. The proceedings of the Convention were orderly and harmonious, each delegate being determined to do all in his power to advance the interests of the party. Their action was fully endorsed by the people present without a dissenting voice. A few more counties like old Chesterfield would settle the Mozart party forever.

Death of an Old Chesterfieldian .- Mr. King Fowler, said to be the oldest citizen of Chesterfield, died recently at his home, in the county, at the advanced age of ninety-nine years. He resided during the long period of his life near Clover Hill, and was known throughout the county. His remains were interred in the county of Chestertield.

City School Board .- The Manchester city School Board will meet this evening in the "Traylor" building, on Hull street, for the purpose of rearranging the grades in the different schools. Superintendent B. A. Hancock is president of the Board. It is necessary to rearrange the grades on ac count of the abolishment of a school in the intermediate grade.

Maury Cemetery .- During the month of August there were seven interments at Maury Cemetery, near this city-all being white (four male and three females). One of the females was a pauper, and was buried t the expense of the cit
